

MOUNTAIN WOLF JEEP ADVENTURES

“Not Your Average Jeep Tour”

Wolf makes every mile unforgettable!

A tour with Wolfgang “Wolf” Uberbacher of Mountain Wolf Jeep Adventures is so much more than a fun ride in a Jeep. A day with Wolf combines a nature lesson, photography class, scenic picnic, sightseeing, belly laughing and unforgettable yodeling.

The experience and the guide are intertwined, as Wolf brings his unique energy, passion for nature and brilliant smile to every tour.

“I truly love what I do, and because of that I’ve never worked a day in my life,” he says.

Wolf grew up in the Austrian Alps, where he cultivated his knowledge of nature through spending every day outside. As a young man, he became a professional chef, he received Austrian Army survival training and taught survival classes, all while becoming a certified ski instructor.

Wolf came to America for the first time in the 1960s to teach skiing and was one of Vail Mountain’s first instructors.

In the summers, however, Jeep tours are his passion.

Wolf drives an unconventional vehicle for an unconventional tour. The seven-passenger, open-air Jeep is one of a kind, Adventures in 1990. The vehicle allows for a smooth ride on U.S. Forest Service Roads, while the open top Jeep gives passengers a great view and immerses them in the surrounding nature.

As an avid outdoorsman, Wolf takes into consideration the local geography to give visitors an unforgettable picnic experience.

A born mountain man, “My favorite part of the job is sharing nature with my clients,” Wolf says.

Safety is Wolf’s priority, and fun and learning follow not far behind.

He knows everything about the flora and fauna that surround his passengers during tours, from the Latin names of plants to the behavioral patterns of animals.

But as he says, “Guests don’t care how much you know until they know how much you care.”

Wolf leads by example in everything he does, leaving his environment better than he found it and treating clients like they are his friends and family.

Each trip is tailored to meet the needs, interests and desires of the passengers, from the scenery to the activities to the food.

Guests interested in seeing wildlife might start their tour at dawn, while those excited about photography will be taken to the area’s most beautiful sights. Families with kids might combine their tour with a hike to a lake or waterfall while learning about what to eat to survive in the wilderness.

With each tour the last living Renaissance Man gives is unique, one thing is true about them all: It will be a fun, individualized experience that will leave riders wanting more.
